1. Why does F4E process my personal data? Whose data is processed?

An Information Day is a public physical or virtual presentation session organised by Fusion for Energy (F4E) to the benefit of potential tenderers dealing with all or some aspects of a forthcoming or ongoing procurement procedure. In addition, some Information Days also intend to support the establishing of partnerships among participants in order to increase competition. Processing personal data occurs within the context of compiling an attendance list, communicating information regarding the information day to data subjects and controlling the access to the physical or virtual information day room.

Market Surveys are published online to gather information about potential candidates for a procurement activity in a given market (number of companies, their capabilities, specific experiences and interest in relation to one or more business opportunities with F4E). Processing personal data occurs within the context of compiling the list of participants and communicating information regarding the Market Survey to data subjects.

For both the information days and the market surveys, in certain cases, upon the explicit request from the participant, the data can be used to support the finding of partners for the Call for Tender or for F4E to contact data subjects in regards to their (company's) competence.

Furthermore, the (professional) email addresses of all data subjects are stored on F4E's Market Intelligence Platform to enable F4E to contact the representatives in regards to their competence.

Data Subjects are representatives of the companies participating in the Information Day/Market Survey.
